Excerpt: .all the clinical findings with the findings from the plates. A statement has been sent broadcast that the rontgenologist will soon eliminate the clinician, and that the rbntgenological diagnosis will suffice for the general practitioner. There is a tendency among practitioners to accept the reading of the rontgenological plate and eliminate all the wonderful findings of physical diagnosis. We recognize, of course, that the rontgenological findings can be nothing more than a diagnostic aid, and yet as such they are of very great importance. Dr. Daland has said that it is absolutely necessary to have such a reading for a complete study of the case; and, of course, that is very largely true for many of the border-line differentiations. But only in the border-line differentiations is it a matter of necessity. Of course, the rontgenological plate does not diagnose tuberculosis in its activity; it...
